Premier Sees Difficult Time Ahead

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Dec. 7.—After the declaration of the poll here today showing him winner with more than six thousand of a majority over his Liberal opponent, Stanley Baldwin said to his constituents: "I think from the look of things I am going to have a rather difficult time in front, but I'm never afraid of difficulties and at all events I shall be able to face them knowing I have your confidence and support."

VALPARAISO, Chile, December 7.—The German steamer Dueseldorf is stranded on the rocks in Quintero Bay, a short distance north of Valparaiso.

The S. S. Senef arrived from ports on the Cook's Harbor service yesterday, bringing a part cargo of cod oil and two passengers, Messrs. Edward and B. McDonald.

AIR SPEED RECORD SMASHED THRICE IN ONE DAY BY RIVAL AMERICAN AVIATORS

Lieut. Harold J. Brow (left) shaking hands with his brother officer, Lieut. Alford J. Williams, winner of the Pulitzer Trophy at the St. Louis races. These two aviators, in their Curtiss Navy racers, recently at Mitchell, broke all existing speed records by miles in a friendly contest to see whether the result of the Pulitzer races determined the real merits of their respective planes. Lieutenant Brow made one burst of speed at the incredible velocity of 265 miles per hour, his final trial; and then Lieut. Williams took the air and made a record flight of 266.53 miles per hour. In 1912 the aerial speed record was 125 miles per hour.

Situation is Most Complex in History

Baldwin Will Meet Defeat in Commons.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The situation now is one of the most complex that has ever occurred in British politics. It is generally believed Premier Baldwin will continue to conduct the Government until he meets with defeat in the Commons. Since it will be impossible for him to put through the Protection measures which formed the only purpose of his campaign, he will probably invite defeat as the most graceful way out of his position by proposing any motion in the House which the Laborites and Liberals will oppose. The Government would thus be overthrown and the King, according to custom, will summon Ramsay MacDonald, as leader of the official opposition party, to form a cabinet.

Paper Says Baldwin Must Now Resign

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Evening Standard to-day insists that Premier Baldwin, having appealed to Caesar and then been rejected, has no alternative but to submit his resignation.

Sixteen Are Lost in Gale

SEATTLE, Dec. 7.—Sixteen persons are believed to have perished as the result of a 24-hour gale which swept the northwest coast territory Wednesday night and early yesterday, causing great property damage, crippling communication facilities, and inundating portions of several states. Fifteen persons are believed to have been drowned when the steamer T. W. Lake sank yesterday in Rosario Straits.

Mexicans Are In Revolt

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 7.—Troops in the entire maritime zone have joined in the rebellion against President Obregon and General Calles, according to a report received here this morning. The rebellion is said to embrace the whole Huasteca oil region. The leaders of the movement, including Adolph de la Huerta, General Sanchez, chief of Military operations in this district, and Jorge Prieto Laurens, are preparing to set up a provisional government here and plan to elect one of their number as provisional president. Rafael Zeburan Company is reported to be slated for the position. The purpose of the movement appears to be to prevent Federal interferences with the affairs of the States.

Spain Is Swept By Violent Storm

SANTADREA, Spain, Dec. 7.—A violent storm in the Northeast of Spain has caused much damage at various ports. At San Lucar four ships foundered and all the crews were lost. At Giron all piers were under water and ships torn from their moorings. At San Sebastian piers are flooded and the street inundated.

DUBLIN, Dec. 7.—It is announced that the Irish Free State loan of ten million pounds has been oversubscribed. The books were closed to-day.

Asquith Is Greeted In London

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Former Premier Asquith, returning to London to-night as leader of the re-united Liberal Party, was greeted by crowds with shouts of "Good old Asquith!" Speaking from a motor car, he said: "We killed Protection. Free trade is safe. Protection is dead and buried."

CHAPTER XV.

My name is Carew," smilingly replied that gentleman, who began to suspect that his opposite neighbor had perhaps had as much wine as was good for him, and to regret his invitation to him to take more.

"Ah! Yes! Carew, certainly!" exclaimed Old Harry, recovering himself with an effort. "You must excuse me if you please, Mr. Carew.
But I really owe you an apology and an explanation, which I will proceed to give you. My old friend there, Commodore Howard, can bear me out in my statements."

The commodore bowed, tho he had not the remotest idea what was coming.

Mr. Carew looked politely attentive and a little amused. He was not yet sure that his new friend was quite himself.

"Mr. Carew, the earliest friend of my boyhood and the dearest friend of my manhood, was Reginald Percie, the late proprietor of this beautifuplace. Sir, you are the very counterpart of what Reginald Percie was in his young manhood—form, figure, height, size, proportion, hair eyes—all! Why, the very smile with which you listen to me was Reginald Percie's smile before it was yours. And your eyes, the love-compelling eyes of the Percies, that no woman's heart could resist, you have them, sir. Reginald Percie was the handsomest man of his day, sir, and you are his perfect image!"

This was extremely embarrassing, to say the least of it, to any modest man. And so Mr. Carew signed to the butler, who brought him a bottle of Haut Sauterne—a very sobering wine, it is said, for those who have had too much port and sherry. He bade the man fill his glass, and take the bottle around to Colonel Carew.
"Thanks, Mr. Carew," said the Colonel, as he filled his own glass—
"thanks. Your health."

And both gentlemen bowed as they raised their glasses to their lips:

"I was saying, Mr. Carew that the resemblance sends me back a quarter of a century. As I gazed at you, sir—and I could not help gazing—I fell into a sort of reverie and grew uncon-

in my thoughts?"

"By no means," politely acquiesced
Mr. Carew.

"Why, sir, if I had not known the history of Reginald Percie's life, and known that he left but one child, a daughter, our beautiful young hostess, here, by my word, sir, I should have taken you to be his son. It looks so natural and right to see you in this house, sir. And, by the way, if you should be so happy as to woo and win sir, you would be the right man in

"Excuse me, Colonel, we had bet-the wine? And by the way, is it not time to join them?" politely inquired

Mr. Carew.

"Certainly; let us to the ladies.
I wish to have a word with my cousin Kate before I say good-night," assented the gallant Colonel, as he set the example of rising from the table.
They went into the drawing room and found it empty.

Musa and her guests were assembled on the front piazza, enjoying the beauty of the night and the coolness of the sea breeze.

"Welcome, gentlemen," said Musa, turning graciously to receive her guests, from whom a simultaneous low murmur of delight at the beauty of the moonlit Isle was heard.

"Bay Beauty! Yes, it is a paradisa-cal scene!" murmured August Carew, as he gazed with something like veneration upon the beauty of the heavens and the earth.

"We thought we would take our coffee out here," said the practical Clarice; "so, if you like, Musa, my dear, as the gentlemen have joined us at last, I will ring for it."

"Do so, if you please," said Musa smiling.
In a few moments coffee, tea and chocolate were brought out on a large silver waiter, and served to the visitors.

And all chatted gaily and some a little recklessly, as they held the delicate cups and sipped the beverage at intervals.

When the cups were empty Clarice said it was time for her to go home.
"But I thought you would occupy the Lily Room that you have reserved for yourself. Will you not do so, to please me?" inquired Musa, in a low tone of regret and entreaty.

"No, not to-night, dear Musa," murmured Clarice in reply. "You must know that I am housekeeper at The Shoals. There is really no lady there but myself. And to-morrow is the third of July and we have to prepare for a large company on the Fourth. I have invited all your friends, Musa, and of course you will come. I shall cry all day if you don't."

"Of course my darling, I shall go;
that is, if my guests do. My action must be ruled by theirs, you are aware," said Musa.

"I suppose so," Clarice reluctantly agreed.

The next day was one of the most glorious that ever dawned upon the earth and sea.

Bay Beauty seemed a perfect Eden of delight.

The pleasant family breakfast parlor was the large front room on the right-hand side of the wide middle entrance hall.

A merry party was gathered around the breakfast table, consisting of Mrs.
Shrewsbury, Mrs. Kate Carew, Armida Sulton, Musa and August Carew.

They were all, even including Mrs.
Chief Justice, in the gayest spirits, as they discussed their plans for the day and the morrow.

Musa was much in the company of August Carew throughout the day, and was charmed with him. She discovered that the beauty of his mind equalled the attractiveness of his person, and that his nature was spontaneously responsive to whatever was beneficent and noble.

The next day, when all the company went to spend the Fourth of July at The Shoals, Musa became still better acquainted with August, and her respect for him continually deepened, and her admiration of him

Canon Bolt at George St. Church

"I urge therefore that we work together for the uplifting of our land, that we all endeavour to promote righteousness and peace within our borders. We may not agree on all points, we may still continue to differ, but we can at least maintain the truth, as we see it, in love," says learned Preacher.

REV. CANON BOLT

The substance of an Address Delivered by the Rev. Canon Bolt, at George's Street Church, on Tuesday, December 4th, on the Occasion of a Fraternal Meeting in Connection With the Golden Jubilee.

The first thought, which occurs to one on an occasion such as this, is that fifty years ago an invitation to be present would neither have been given, or accepted. But much water has run under the bridge since then, and you in extending this invitation, and you in accepting it, are but acting in the spirit which is today animating all men of good-will in all communities.

This being so, the question not unnaturally arises, what has brought about this altered attitude? In the first place it has been brought about, I think, because we are able to take a fairer view than our fathers were of our respective positions. They lived too near to the events, and were more greatly stirred by the spirit which caused the cleavage in the past. The lapse of time has helped us to form a more unbiased judgment of the past.

Then too the Mission Field has done much to soften the animosities of the past. Men have learnt in the foreign field that in offering our religion to the non-Christian races, it is not the "Lambeth Appeal." It is universal.

sally acknowledged that the Holy Spirit was working in that Assembly as truly as in any age of the Church; else there could never have emanated from the Conference, the appeal which electrified the world. For reversing all former efforts, the appeal proposed not the exclusion, but the inclusion of what was distinctive, in order that all should bring in their contribution, and thus enrich the united Church of the future. It was a magnificent vision. A vision which from some points of view may seem difficult, if not impossible of fulfillment, but if we really desire it "that the vision be for many days, it will surely come, it will not tarry."

I wish, therefore, on the present occasion, which is somewhat unique, to make Re-union the burden of my remarks. Re-union may be a long way off, but none the less we shall all of us endeavour to create an atmosphere in which it may be possible. It is necessary to do this considering the view of our present divisions, which is held by ordinary people.

For what is the view of the ordinary person? Putting on one side those who are antagonistic to other denominations than their own, who, I venture to hope, are relatively small in number, the ordinary person is quite satisfied with his present position. He argues that the Church of his fathers in which he has been brought up, is good enough for him, he has no desire to join with others, and perhaps in his heart of hearts he thinks that "opposition is the life of trade." He holds that the normal condition is for every man to go his own way. What he does not realize is that in the light of the teaching of the New Testament, our present divisions are not normal, but abnormal and that Our Lord's High Priestly prayer, "that we may be one" will be fulfilled, until we are able as brethren to meet around the one altar.

It will need some education, therefore, before men generally realize this. With a view to that end, I venture to suggest that we would all of us do well to forget the past, not altogether perhaps, for as Bishop Creighton has reminded us, we do well to study the past, not for imitation, but for warning. In the past there were faults on both sides. We may fairly admit that the Church of England did not know what to do with John Wesley, any more than the Methodists knew what to do with William Booth. We must beware of judging the past through the spectacles of to-day. We can now acknowledge the great work which Wesley did, and we are sorry that the Church of England did not use such a man as Wesley, who was consumed with the desire to revive true religion in the land. But enthusiasm was considered a very ugly word in that age, and even such a profound thinker as Bishop Butler had misgivings as to Wesley's methods. We could wish now that there had been more sympathy and forbearance on the one side, and that the other perhaps had been a little less head-strong.

For there was no real difference of doctrine that need have caused the separation. Think how greatly the Church of England would have been enriched by the enthusiasm and democratic spirit of the Methodists, while on the other hand, would not the Methodists have gained by the soberness, and, shall I say, staidness of the Church of England? With the Methodists' passion for individual liberty and the Church of England's regard for tradition and authority, we would have a splendid combination. It should surely be our endeavour to effect such union, for surely amid the divisions of Anglo-Saxon Christianity, there is no body, than the Methodists, more akin to the Church of England, from which they sprang.

I plead, therefore, for a better understanding between us, for fellowship rather than rivalry. The work which lies before all of us is so vast, that it requires united effort. Our common task is so great that we cannot afford to spend our strength on denominational disputes. The battle of the future will be not between denominations, but between belief and unbelief. The world needs leadership. It is looking for such leadership to the Church as a whole. We may not witness the millennium. Re-union may yet be a long way off, but at least we can cultivate a spirit of fellowship, and do what we can to retrieve the mistakes of the past. We none of us have a monopoly of grace. No age has a complete view of the truth. Few of us hold the faith in true proportion. There are depths that all of us together have not yet plunged. The Holy Spirit is always leading men to a fuller realization of the truth.

I urge therefore that we work together for the uplifting of our land, that we all endeavour to promote righteousness and peace within our borders. We may not agree on all points, we may still continue to differ, but we can at least maintain the truth, as we see it, in love.

By cultivating such a spirit we shall not only be benefiting the Community in which we live, we shall not only be promoting a better understanding between man and man, but we shall be hastening the time when with restored good-will and a renewed sense of brotherhood, those who never drawn together again, when the mid-understanding and heart burnings of the past will be buried for ever, when in the fellowship of a united Church, Judah will no longer vex Ephraim, and Ephraim will no longer envy Judah.

GIRLS! USE A MOIST BRUSH

Instantly a Gleamy Mass of Beautiful Hair

The effect is startling. You actually see plain, flat, oily or colorless hair become soft, fluffy, lustrous and abundant in a moment.

Try it! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance—yet not greasy, oily or sticky.

While beautifying the hair, "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a 35-cent bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair becomes.

Community in which we live, we shall not only be promoting a better understanding between man and man, but we shall be hastening the time when with restored good-will and a renewed sense of brotherhood, those who never drawn together again, when the mid-understanding and heart burnings of the past will be buried for ever, when in the fellowship of a united Church, Judah will no longer vex Ephraim, and Ephraim will no longer envy Judah.

Last Night's Jubilee Ceremonies at George Street Church

Mr. H. J. Russell, General Superintendent of the Nfld. Government Railway, occupied the chair at George Street Church last evening, and the speakers were Rev. C. H. Johnson and Rev. Dr. Hemmison.

Rev. Mr. Johnson stated that the Rev. H. P. Cowperthwaite had spoken with a man that heard Wesley preach. When he saw what had been done within such a span, was there not encouragement to go forward. If we looked at the history of Methodism in this country we would see that from 1776 to 1791 it was kept alive by the laity. From this he deduced that future progress depended not so much on the choice of ministers as on the spirit of the people in the pews.

The location of the Church demanded that special provision should be made for the social needs of the people living in its vicinity. There should be more encouragement of the spirit of laughter.

He was wonderfully impressed by Canon Bolt's address on Tuesday. He believed that the next fifty years would be an era in which Christian unity would make great strides. He believed that the best results could only be brought about by continuous and united prayer.

Rev. Dr. Hemmison then addressed the meeting. After a few words of greeting, the Rev. gentleman became serious and addressed the gathering on the future. He only stressed one point, its call for courage—courage, whilst not forgetting the past and its tender memories, not to hesitate but to sacrifice the things of the past where they could be exchanged for things of deeper value.

The music, as it has been thruout the whole celebration, was good. Mr. Christian and his choir have contributed very materially to the success of the week.

After the meeting was over very many had an opportunity of having a few friendly words with their old friend Mr. now Dr. Hemmison.

Ramsay MacDonald's son. There is no word yet of George P. Trevelyan, nor of Roden Buxton, nor of George Lansbury, nor of Frank Hodgson, Secretary of the Million Miners of Britain, who sent that fine message of greetings to the Fishermen's Convention, a few weeks ago.

It is a great pity that the Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, a prominent Laborite, was defeated. No doubt the party will put him up in the first favorable bye-election and he will not be long outside Parliament. Dr. R. Dunstan, Labor, put up a plucky fight against the Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, son of the late Joseph Chamberlain, and Chancellor of the Exchequer under Premier Baldwin, but was defeated by a narrow margin. Chamberlain got 17,884 votes, and Dunstan 11,330.

PROMINENT LABOR CORRESPONDENT

I do not know if the Rt. Hon. Dr. Addison, P.C., was a Labor candidate. Dr. Addison, who was Minister of Public Health in the Lloyd George Cabinet, resigned from the Liberal party and joined the Labor party because it met his ideals and the Liberal party did not. Dr. Addison was one of the most brilliant and prominent members of Lloyd George's cabinet. He was formerly Minister of Munitions, President of the Board of Local Government, and Parliamentary Secretary of Education. Dr. Addison, when Minister of Health, preceding Sir Alfred Mond, projected a national house-building scheme to meet the terrible housing shortage in Britain, and to provide work for some of the unemployed, of whom there were 1,500,000. He accused Lloyd George of deliberately killing his plans, and resigned in disgust and joined the Labor party. He is the latest of a growing number of the finest Liberals who have been enrolling under the Labor banner, some of the others being Col. Wedgwood, Arthur Ponsonby, Geo. Trevelyan, Roden Buxton, Hon. Bertrand Russell, A. G. Gardiner, former editor of the London Daily News, which Charles Dickens founded; H. W. Massingham, famous Liberal Editor; Hamilton Fyfe, formerly a novelist.

Randomites believe in education as one of the greatest assets that youth can be possessor of. There are nine schools on the island and some of them splendidly equipped materially, while the personnel of the teaching staff is of a very good calibre. Some of the teachers not only work faithfully in directing the minds of the young during the week, but also preach on Sundays. Mr. LeGrow at Britannia, has very generously plunged into the work of local preacher, and some very encouraging things are being said of his efforts. Mr. S. Loder of Thoroughfare is a teacher and layreader or long standing and deserves the appreciation of the people which we believe they give him ungrudgingly. Random Island is well ahead of the times too in this respect, because it has a lady layreader in the person of Miss Sibill Diamond of Snooks Harbor. The remainder of the teachers while not doing work of such a public nature are all keenly interested in the morale of their particular neighborhood.

A New Educational Plan

Britannia! Why the name itself suggests the proud maiden of the island, and she has every reason to be proud of at least one thing and that is the magnificent new school that has just been finished. It is second to none in the whole island of Newfoundland. A single storey building of two very commodious departments beautifully finished in beaver board, the whole building is double celled inside and out in addition to the beaver board and cladding. It is covered with a mansard roof secured with felt and slate, guaranteed impervious to all kinds of weather which might sweep down Smith's Sound during the next forty years. The porches are very beautifully done and include cloak room and lavatory accommodation. The basement is arranged so that fuel can be cut and stored there. Well done Britannia! We understand that the energetic and generous John T. Currie has been interested in its erection, which speaks volumes.

Home Again

The men are one by one returning from the various centres of employment and all looking well after the summer away and certainly feeling much better in pocket. A number have been working in Boston and have done very well indeed. The dollar is none the less sweet though stamped with the image of the Eagle. It is also gratifying to note that the fishermen who went to Quirpon this summer did very well, and one cannot help but note the striking difference in appearance between the look of those who worked in Boston and other cities, sometimes in sweltering heat, and always under a master, and those who followed the sea. It seems that so far as health is concerned it is better to wear oilskins than overalls and in the end just as profitable. John T. Currie's schooner the "George Wheatley" did well and ran the crews from Lady Cove, John Weldon Currie who was down in the Wheatley doing business in Quirpon.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, SATURDAY, DEC. 8th., 1923.

A BRITISH DEADLOCK

The British poll has been declared; and the Conservatives, under Premier Baldwin, are again the Government of Britain. Election results, however, do not record a victory for the Baldwin policy of Protection. To the contrary, that policy has been, as in the days of Chamberlain, sternly rejected by the British electorate.

Whatever the urgency of present conditions in the Mother Country, whatever the international outlook as it affects British industry and British workers, the oldest and most thorough Democracy of the world have placed on their ballots their continued faith in "Free Trade" and their disapproval of protection.

None can dispute the verdict of the polls. None can condemn nor criticize the pronouncement of a people so zealous and so capable to safeguard their country's future.

Very few doubt Mr. Baldwin's sincerity or his belief that protection was the best remedy for the country's ailments. Every protectionist will regret the actual impossibility of the returned Government to carry out a protection policy in the face of the country. The British dominions who were more than spectators in the battle of Protection versus Free Trade, will feel that the British people have disapproved of a programme, that was Imperial in its scope, adopted as it was by the Overseas representatives at the recent Imperial Conference. The United States and other protectionist countries (and they are all more or less protectionist) will see their hopes realised in a Free Trade victory. Protection, in one country dislikes Protection in another country; and no countries, having regard for its industry, wished to see the vast British possessions enjoying what has been termed "free trade or, at least preferential trade within the Empire and protection without it."

While, in many ways, the Baldwin policy was national, it was also Imperial in its scope. The British people were asked to confirm a policy adopted by the Empire's representatives. They have refused strongly to do so.

Will Baldwin be able to carry on?

A three-cornered contest has saved him a numerical majority of seats over either of his opposing parties, the combined forces of which now number 343 as against 259 Conservatives. While Labour and Liberal policies differed, they were mutually opposed to protection and supported free trade. There are therefore 343 Free Traders as against 259 Protectionists on the floors of the House of Commons. How, therefore, can Baldwin carry on?

If he determines so to do, and in event that any two of the parties do not find a common understanding in policy, uncertainty and indecision will characterise British politics until once again an appeal is made to the people when there would be no greater certainty of avoiding a political deadlock.

Some credence may reasonably be given to the despatches indicating that Baldwin may invite a decision by the Commons to relieve him of his embarrassing position.

There are those who believe Labor, a clean political party, will not associate with the Liberal Party, whose sins they are not prepared to shoulder and whose leaders, particularly Churchill and Lloyd George, so violently attacked them during the campaign.

Nevertheless, after considering the acute political situation and having, in common, their opposition to protection, it may be not unlikely that the Labor Party (an entity in themselves) may be able to unite on a policy with certain sections of Liberals and perhaps Conservatives to form a stable government.

To those who have the cause of the common people at heart and whose heart is with the Labor cause, it is indeed gratifying that the Labor Party has attained such a splendid position in Britain.

Behind that body of honest, well-meaning and high-principled men were not the coffers of the wealthy classes of Britain. Behind them were not the great industrial magnates of the land, the employers of workmen nor the millionaires and peers of Britain. Behind them were the workers, and the workers' wives, whose personal sacrifices and socials, and dances, supplied the scanty funds for campaign expenses. Monied influences of the landed classes, the polished promises of Conservatives nor Liberal, nor the fiery eloquence of a Churchill, nor the brilliant personality of a Lloyd George could sway the workmen from their faith in their own new party, the Labor Party. To them, the time had gone when the show of wealth, promises, personalities or eloquence could take the place of their own policy for the people.

So they won.

They have increased their gains. They are the second party of Britain. They have outlasted a party that contained some of the greatest men of Britain and have defeated these men, in many constituencies, by Labor votes.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald has not been removed from the front benches, though Churchill has been driven from West Leicester.

Yet, the Liberals may too take heart. They have made their gains.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Well, British women are making gains, too.

Where also is his boast that MacDonald would be ousted from the front bench?

Winston Churchill was hard on Labour. Well, Labour was hard on him in West Leicester. Perhaps, Churchill saw what was coming.

There are only thirteen days more in which to do Christmas shopping. Purchasers should not, in justice to the clerks in the stores, leave their buying till Christmas Eve night.

One large new town and at least two new settlements have sprung up in Newfoundland within the space of a few months and more to follow. Not bad for a little country which disappointed politicians told us was drifting on the rocks.

Poor Politicus has a bad dose of political pip. If he goes to the woods he should be careful not to become still further infected by the bud worm.

For a paper with such a lofty sense of justice in all things, the Daily News surely does leave its door open wide for all who would misrepresent and vilify a political opponent.

The Daily News will soon come to be known as the "Rogues Refuge".

In every country one finds funny situations, but in this respect Newfoundland takes the bun. This is a Prohibition Country, yet we frequently have the spectacle of policemen keeping watch and ward over cargoes of liquor that come here on their way to being smuggled into another Prohibition country. Surely, it is to laugh.

According to Mussolini, Italy's position in the League of Nations is not consistent with her status as a great power. He proceeds to make the other powers recognise Italy by creating a Mediterranean Alliance with Spain. France is one of the first to set up and think.

One would think the cost of bread high in Berlin, where a loaf cost 140,000,000,000 marks. It is only 30 cents after all.

Competition is the life of trade. The war trade is no exception. Great Britain's project to build a naval base at Singapore caused a political upheaval in Holland, where a costly protection policy has been evolved for Holland's Pacific colonies. Armaments beget armaments.

The Ruhr occupation by France has been a costly venture; one, which has failed to receive a united French support. There are signs that Poincaré has lost favour of late. According to Marcel Cachin, leader of the French Communist Party, France has received barely one-third of the coal that was obtained from Germany last year. There was an actual deficit of hundreds of millions of francs instead of a profit, while French industry had been injured to the extent of billions. Funny there should be such differences of opinion in the one country.

Says the Ottawa Bureau of Statistics, Canada sold to Great Britain products worth $367,000,000 and purchased $155,000,000 worth during the past 12 months. This is quite a favourable balance to Canada.

Labor contested 434 seats in this present election. Watch the rise of the Labour Party in the following figures:

In 1900 Labor fought 15 seats, returned 2 members, polling 62,699 votes.

In 1906 fought 50 seats, returned 29 members, polling 323,105 votes.

In 1910 fought 78 seats, returned 40 members, polling 505,890 votes.

In 1910 (second election) fought 56 seats, returned 42 members, polling 370,802 votes.

In 1918 fought 361 seats, returned 57 members, polling 2,244,945 votes.

In 1922 fought 414 seats, returning 142 members, polling 4,236, 733 votes.

On Thursday, fought 434 seats, and so far have 195.

Canadian Trade Commissioner Gordon B. Johnson, in an article dealing with the financial and industrial condition of Ireland would disillusion the minds of those who believe Ireland on the verge of bankruptcy. He has this to say:

"A wide-spread opinion prevails at present that Ireland stands upon the brink of bankruptcy, with ruined credit and scanty prospects, and with excessive expenditure to be faced in the immediate future. Like most general impressions of the kind which find wide publicity, this idea would seem, on closer examination, and in the light of actual figures, readily available, to be not even a half-truth."

"That the state of industry and trade has been very bad is evident—but the matter for surprise is that the conditions are as good as they are—after a violent political upheaval and a destructive civil war."

"When the condition of Ireland is compared with that of many of the countries of continental Europe we find that Irishmen have, after all, very little to grumble about," he continues. "Even in England, where a sound financial policy has been pursued since the war, the state of trade and the circulation of money are very little better than in Ireland."

Gallant Rescue of Newfoundlanders

London Papers Describe Saving of Lives of Crew of the "Gay Gordon"

HIS MAJESTY CONFERS MEDALS FOR BRAVERY

The King, upon the recommendation of six hands belonging to the Board of Trade, has awarded the Bronze Medal for Gallantry in Saving Life at Sea to Mr. Frederick Cook, Chief Officer, M. Mahoney, J. Collins, G. Elliott, R. L. Davies, seamen, and J. G. Reed, carpenter, of the steamship Hollinside, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, in recognition of their services to the shipwrecked crew of the Gay Gordon, of St. John's, Newfoundland, on April 21.

The Gay Gordon, whilst on a voyage from Oporto to Newfoundland was in distress on the date in question in the North Atlantic, and in response to her signals the Hollinside went to her assistance. At about 8.30 p.m. the crew of the Gay Gordon shouted to be taken off as their vessel was sinking, and after considerable difficulty the port lifeboat of the Hollinside was launched in charge of the Chief Officer and manned by the above-mentioned seamen, and succeeded in rescuing the crew of six hands belonging to the Newfoundland schooner. By skilful manoeuvring the master of the Hollinside succeeded in getting to the leeward of the sinking vessel, and after about an hour and a quarter's work the rescuers and rescued were safely got on board. Substantial risk was incurred in rendering these services owing to the darkness, strong wind, and squalls of rain. It was difficult to get the boat away owing to the steamer rolling heavily, and there was also The Gay Gordon, as she was in a water-logged condition and wallowing heavily in the swell. Moreover, the lifeboat used was badly damaged and had to be abandoned.

In addition, the Board of Trade have received, through the High Commissioner for Newfoundland, a piece of plate for Captain A. Blakey, Master; binoculars for Mr. Frederick Cook, Chief Officer; and the sum of £3 for each of the seamen of the Hollinside who effected the rescue, which have been awarded by the Dominion Government of Newfoundland in recognition of their services.

From The Masthead

By The Lookout.

On Wednesday night, the day before the general election took place in Great Britain, the editor of the Advocate and myself were discussing the impending contest, and I made a forecast of the results. That forecast, as I then set it down on paper for curiosity sake, and passed it into his hands, was as follows:

Conservatives	370
Labor	200

It will be noted that I figured on the basis of there being 625 seats in the House of Commons; whereas, in fact, there are only 615. I therefore gave all three parties just a few more votes than I would have done had I known, or had I remembered, that there are now only 615 seats in Parliament.

As I write this article all but fourteen seats have been heard from, and the returns are as follows—compare them with my forecast:

Conservatives	258
Labor	185
Liberal	148

I believe that of the fourteen seats yet to be heard from quite a few if not the majority, will go to Labor, since they appear to be Scottish seats, and Scotland is a great Labor country, having had thirty-two members in the last Parliament. I believe that the final returns will show Scotland to have increased over last year. I notice that Glasgow elected one Labor member more than last year, and I had fancied that Labor had polled its full strength there in the last general election, the rest consisting mostly of the residential districts of business-men, etc. However, the Glasgow contingent of Laborites has been increased, and that is significant.

TREMENDOUS LABOR GAINS

I also believe that the Labor Party has polled as many votes as, if not actually more than, the Conservative Party. As my memory serves me, the votes cast in the general election last year were: Conservatives 5,390,000; Labor, 4,369,000; United Liberals, about 4,000,000. The Conservatives thus took office on a majority vote, seeing that over 8,000,000 people had voted for their opponents. In this election probably more than 5,000,000 voted for the Labor Party, and over 4,000,000 for the Liberals. That would mean that over 9,000,000 people had voted this time against the Conservatives, or a loss to them of 1,000,000 votes in just a year. That very clearly makes them a minority party, quite unrepresentative of the people of Britain. The fact that they captured so many seats last year, and so many as they have this year, is only indicative of the lack of proportional representation in Britain.

Not only will it now be impossible for the Conservatives to put thru their protective tariff scheme, but they may find it impossible to carry on the administration of government affairs, since they will not possess more than 265 members in the House of Commons, and will have 340 members against them. True, the latter are not united in one party; but they are as one in their opposition to tariff protection, and as one in their demand for a progressive policy in foreign relations.

CALL ON MACDONALD!

It is therefore entirely possible that the Conservatives will resign or in some way back out of office. Then the King would call upon James Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor Party, again the official opposition in Parliament, to form a Cabinet. Mr. MacDonald might or might not make the attempt. He could naturally expect more support from the Liberals than the Conservatives can expect from the Liberals.

Of one thing I feel absolutely certain: the Labor Party will not form a coalition with the Liberals, even for the sake of forming a government. The Labor Party is a clean party, with a clean slate and no black record. Its policy is "no trade or truck with any outsiders." Its policy is to remain independent until it can form an independent Labor government, when it would be in a position to get the credit for its good and receive blame only for its bad points. The Liberals will no doubt make overtures to Labor to form a coalition, but I do not believe that Labor will compromise its principles.

It is possible that the Conservatives will publicly drop their protective tariff schemes, and either agree to support a Liberal government, or retain office and ask the support of the Liberals.

probable that the King of England will be calling upon a Laborite, a Socialist, a Pacifist, James Ramsay MacDonald, to form a Cabinet to govern Britain. Who could have believed it five years ago! Ramsay MacDonald, of all men! He who opposed the Great War, who went into oblivion because he was a pacifist; who bore the sneers and contempt of all men because he opposed the war; who was an outcast and a pariah, and hardly dared show himself in public! This mind you, a few short years ago, no more than five years ago. History can show few more eloquent examples of men "coming back". I make this prophecy now: when James Ramsay

MacDonald becomes Prime Minister of Great Britain he will only do honor to the traditions of the great men who have filled that high position in days past—Gladstone and Pitt and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Lord John Russell and the others. For Mr. MacDonald is one of Britain's finest intellects, perhaps her best Parliamentary orator and today her soundest statesman, without a single exception.

I assert here that not in the long history of the British House of Parliament has any party contained such a high standard of intelligence, intellect, honesty, sincerity, idealism, progressivism and sound, wise statesmanship as the British Labor party in the Commons today! That party possesses an array of debating talent; that it would be hard to equal any where in the world. It possesses a greater fund of information, a more varied list of thinkers, more sound statesman and altogether a higher standard of administrative ability than any party in any parliament on earth.

REMARKABLE PROGRESS

The onward sweep of the British Labor party is shown very significantly by the returns of the elections in which it has taken part:

1888	0
1900	2

1906	29
1914	39
1919	61
1922	74
1922 (November)	144
1923 (May)	190

From two members to 190 members in twenty-three years is remarkable progress! A gain to fort-six members in one short year is very remarkable progress! From polling 615 votes in 1888 to 5,000,000 in 1923, is very, very remarkable progress! Had this present election taken place about two years from now, I am firmly of the opinion that the Labor party would elect nearer 300 members than 190. Furthermore, should there be no further election for the next couple of years, and Labor be not in office in the meantime, I believe that Labor will gain that many then. The Conservative party was in office only a short year—too short a period to enable the British people to find out that Conservative policies are as much a superficial sham and fraud as were those of Mr. Lloyd George, and just as incapable of improving the terrible state in which the British people find themselves. It is worth nothing that in this election only about 8,000,000 people voted against the Labor party, while about 5,000,000 voted for it. Just a year ago about 9,000,000 people voted against the Labor party, and 4,000,000 for. A turn-over of 1,000,000 took place in one year. When the British people have a good chance to see that the policies of the Conservatives are as futile and impotent as those of the Liberals, then you will see a turn-over that will take your breath away! Oh, yes, the future of Britain is in the hands of the Labor party! And the Labor party knows it, and is preparing to take office.

JOY THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

There is great joy among the Laborites of all countries of the world today as a result of Labor's tremendous gains, and all Labor parties are spurred to even greater efforts than they have exerted in the past. The British Labor party is the world's most splendid example of a great Labor party ably led and wisely formed.

The victory of F. W. Pethick Lawrence, chief author of the Capital Levy plank in the Labor party platform, over the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, son of Lord Randolph Churchill and former Secretary for War, is one of the most brilliant features of this remarkable election. No man in Britain is so heartily despised by the Laborites as this same Churchill, who coined the phrase "Labor is not fit to govern." He has now discovered that the people of the constituency to which he appealed for election do not consider him fit to govern! He discovered the same interesting thing last year in Dundee, when E. D. Morel the Laborite defeated him so that he is said to have cried bitter tears of disappointment. In these two deliberate instances Laborites have defeated the man who was crying just two weeks ago that he would kick James Ramsay MacDonald out of the position of Labor or the Official Opposition.

I am glad to see the Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of the Railwaymen's Union, re-elected as a Labor member; also Tom Shaw, Ben Tillett, "Bob" Smillie, Dr. S. Hastings is elected for Labor, as well as the brilliant Patrick Hastings, K.C., who will be the first Labor Attorney General of Great Britain. Sir Alfred Mond, Liberal, former Minister of Public Health, went down to defeat at the hands of W. Samuel, Labor candidate. Col. Josiah C. Wedgwood, in whom I feel a sort of personal interest, seeing that I have his autograph in my album was re-elected. Arthur Ponsonby, brother of Sir Frederick Ponsonby, private secretary to King George, is re-elected a Laborite. Mr. Ponsonby, who is one of the notable number of Liberals who have come over to the Labor party, was born in the County of Queen Victoria and was Page of Honor to that monarch. He was later private secretary to Prime Minister Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and sat in the Commons as a Liberal member. The brilliant Philip Snowden, one of Labor's greatest minds, is re-elected. Major C. R. Attlee, M.A., is re-elected. Will Thorne, secretary of the General Workers' Union, is re-elected from West Ham, the first district in British history to return a Labor candidate, the late beloved J. Kier Hardie. Lieut.-Col. Williams is a new-comer to Labor ranks in the Commons, having defeated a Conservative at Lambeth Kennington district. Gaven Duffy has been re-elected. Morgan Jones is back in the Commons. I am delighted to see Geo. Hardie, brother of Kier Hardie, founder of the Labor party, re-elected from Glasgow.

WOMEN LABORITES ELECTED

Margaret Bondfield, Susan Lawrence and Miss Dorothy Jewson are three women to be elected to the Commons for the Labor party. Miss Bondfield is chairman of the British Trades Union Congress, with nearly 6,000,000 members, being the first woman ever elected to that position. Miss Lawrence is a famous woman suffrage writer. I confess to not knowing anything about Miss Jewson's former career in public life. As I write there are no tidings of the Countess of Warwick, who is standing as a Labor candidate. She has been a Laborite and Socialist for thirty-five years.

There is no word so far, either, regarding Sidney Webb, the great economist and statistician; nor of R. H. Tawney, famous sociologist; nor of the Rt. Hon. J. R. Clynes, chairman of the General Workers' Union; nor of Oliver Baldwin, son of the Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister, who stood as a Labor candidate with James

TREATY APPROVED

Commercial Pact May Lead to Military Alliance, Is Believed

ROME, Nov. 29.—The Council of Ministers has approved a commercial treaty between Spain and Italy, which makes Italy one of the "most favored nations in Spain."

Much importance is given this treaty, the approval of which coincides with the departure from Italy of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain and Primo Rivera, president of the Spanish dictatorship.

The Italian press is showing great satisfaction over the treaty between the two countries.

Officially it is denied that there is or that there will be a military treaty between the nations but public opinion seems convinced that this action must come.

Before leaving Italy Senator de Rivera told Naples newspapermen of the great mutual benefits that would result from close co-operation between Spain and Italy, especially commercially. He said that Spain needs Italian manufactured goods and that it can give Italy raw materials such as coal and iron.

Much hope is also being built here over what the united efforts of the two Latin nations may bring about if they are concentrated on commercial activity in Latin America. The population of Latin America are composed of Italians and Spaniards who are sentimentally attached to the countries of their origin. It is desired to establish commercial relations with these people.

LOVELORN YOUTH

Shoots Young Girl Who Rejects Him
MURDEROUS ASSAULTS OCCUR IN BEDROOM OF LONDON BOARDING HOUSE.

Gun Fight in Darkness.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Viola McNaughton, aged 18, formerly of Watford, is dying in Victoria Hospital, and her chum and room-mate Gertrude Durston, also of Watford, is also in the hospital with terrible wounds, as the result of a shooting affray at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Cook, 318 York Street, this morning.

Clarence Topping, aged 23, of 140 Bathurst Street, formerly of Strathroy, is held at the Police Station charged with the murderous assault and he has marks on both legs where he was struck by a bullet fired by P. C. Walter Harpur, who rushed to the scene of the shooting in response to a call for help from Cook.

Dr. Kingwood, Chief of the Medical Staff of Victoria Hospital, states tonight that the McNaughton girl's death seemed only a matter of hours and that it will not be known for some time whether or not the Durston girl will recover.

Wanted to Marry Her.

The affray was the sequel to an attempt on the part of Topping to compel Miss Durston to marry him. She and Miss McNaughton had been employed in the Strathroy Hospital dining-room until last July, when they came to London and secured positions in the factory of the Holcroft Hosiery Company. Miss Durston had been keeping company with Topping, and when she came to London he followed her and secured a job with Left & Company, electricians. Miss Durston had grown tired of her company, however, though she occasionally permitted him to accompany her to her boarding-house. Last night Topping staying until 2 o'clock in the morning trying to persuade her to marry him, and when he departed she told Mr. and Mrs. Cook that the young man had threatened to kill himself and her unless she married him.

Fled to Bedroom.

This morning Topping, knocked at the door at 7 o'clock, with the intention of seeing Miss Durston before she went to work. She became alarmed and, with Miss McNaughton, fled to the bedroom usually occupied by the Cook family.

In the meantime Cook telephoned for the police, and P. C. Harpur arrived in six minutes in a police car. Harpur asked what the trouble was about, and Cook said he would give Topping a chance to leave without being placed under arrest. Topping had in the meantime gained access to the bedroom, where the girls were hiding, and, walking over to Gertrude Durston, he asked her if she were going to marry him. She cried "No," and then fell in a faint. She rallied immediately, however, and when Cook reached the bedroom both girls were attempting to reason with the youth. Cook went back to report to the police man that the man refused to leave, but before he reached the officer, three shots rang out, and the screams of the girls froze the listeners who were in the kitchen.

P. C. Harpur pulled his revolver and ran to the bedroom. In the darkness—the blinds were closely drawn—he saw Topping standing over the prostrate form of a screaming girl, with a revolver in his hand. Topping, according to the policeman, turned quickly, and Harpur says he thought it was either him or the prisoner. He fired, and so did Topping, and then the screams of another woman rent the air. Miss McNaughton had been shot through the chest, and the little finger of her right hand had been wounded. Miss Durston lay on the floor with two bullet wounds in her stomach. Harpur jumped on his man and pinned his arms behind his back. Then he forced him out of the house and into the police auto. With one hand pressing a gun to the prisoner's side, Harpur drove with the other to the police station and handed his man to the Desk Sergeant. Then he rushed back to the house with other officers, and the wounded girls were taken to Victoria Hospital.

At the police station Topping is said to have stated that he intended shooting the girl, but that he did not try to harm the policeman. At Victoria Hospital Miss McNaughton, when told she would likely die, stated that she thought it was a bullet from the police officer's gun that struck her, and she seemed anxious to show that Topping did not fire the shot. The condition of both young women was so bad that they were placed on cots with their clothes on, the doctors fearing that any attempt to undress them would result in immediate death.

P. C. Harpur was greatly distressed by the possibility that in the shooting in the darkened room he may have shot Miss McNaughton, but, of course, he is blameless in the matter. He has been for years a valued member of the London force, and this is the first time he has had occasion to use his revolver.

The police have learned that five years ago Topping, who was then in love with another Strathroy girl, tried to commit suicide by shooting himself in that town. His father is a driver in the Strathroy Fire Department. When placed in a cell at the police station this morning, Topping inside of ten minutes fell sound asleep, and the police say that after leaving the Cook home at 2 o'clock this morning he apparently walked the streets all night and worked himself into a frenzy because the girl would not marry him.

Pathetic Scenes at Hospital.

The parents of both girls arrived within a couple of hours in London, and pathetic scenes followed at the hospital. The relatives were accompanied by Rev. T. De Courcy Rayner, a Congregational minister from Watford, of whose congregation the McNaughtons are members. Mr. McNaughton is a retired farmer. Miss Durston has a brother named Lawrence, to whom Miss McNaughton was engaged to be married.

George Cook is a veteran of the great war, and a former member of the old 7th Regiment of London. He and Mrs. Cook were married two months ago. They bought the furniture in the house at 318 York St. and rented the place. At the time the McNaughton and Durston girls were boarding there, and they remained after the change in ownership.

TESTING TIMES

Manchester Guardian.—We are distressed and impoverished as compared with our pre-war state; we can no more get back to our super-abundant pre-war wealth than we can get back our dead. But we are the only European nation engaged in the war that is paying its way at all, the only one whose currency and credit are not either ruined or trembling in the scale. We are hard pressed; we are to use Mr. Churchill's admirable illustration, going through a time that tests the fortitude and self-control of a nation almost as severely as those qualities were tested in the long ocean voyage of the ship's company in the wrecked Trevesa's boats.

ONLY A RHIZLE

London Evening Standard.—To-day in the large centres of population at least, the election campaign is little more than a ripple on the surface of everyday life. At one time the politician had few competitors. The great mass of the people could not read and had little with which to amuse themselves. Now there are a hundred distractions apart from politics—golf, football, the cinema—and it is much harder, for any political event, however important, to effect the routine of the million.

EXIT THE LEVY

Westminster Gazette.—Mr. Snowden is quite right. If ever the capital levy was opportune, it is so no longer. The mere threat of an election has caused an immense change in values in first-class securities. Capital was never so sensitive; and no one who has the welfare of the country at stake can view these financial disturbances with equanimity.

Poisoner of Family Ends Career in Jail

(By OTTO D. TOLICHUS.)

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—All the famous poison breweries of history and fiction fade before a new poison demon whom justice has just overtaken at Munich in Bavaria.

His name is Robert Huber, and he has just been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment and fifteen years' loss of citizenship rights.

The crimes attributed to Huber by the German police rival anything the wildest imagination has ever conceived. Relatives, friends, even casual acquaintances, are numbered among his victims.

Yet the crime which finally brought him to his fall, was not a poisoning, but an attempt to kill a family by secretly removing a bolt from an automobile so that it would collapse while being used in pursuit of him.

Great Skill

His skill was such that none of his poison activities could be proved with the certainty required by law.

Huber was born poor. He became an assistant in a chemical laboratory. Quickly he promoted himself to a student of chemistry and soon awarded himself the degree of doctor of medicine. In that guise he encashed the daughter of a rich family into his toils and made her his wife. Her ample dowry furnished his growing needs.

From then on he played with his fellow men like a cat with a mouse. His fellow passenger sitting opposite him in the dining railroad car was suddenly seized with an acute attack of poisoning. The young girl whose cheek the dashing young student had caressed, developed an ugly abscess.

These occurrences and Huber's presence aroused suspicion, but legal proof was lacking.

Wanted Riches

Greedy was added to the fascination of power. He wanted the riches of his wife's family all for himself.

The mother-in-law, the sister of his wife who was engaged and demanded a dowry, the whole family of his wife died quickly one after another.

But the evidence against Huber was not even sufficient for his formal prosecution.

France Ready For Accord With De Facto Russia

Report: Commercial Treaty Being Drawn Up In Moscow

DISCARD POLAND!

Rumor Little Entente Also to be Sacrificed in Deal

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—France is ready to recognize de facto Russia.

A commercial treaty is being drawn treaty is being drawn up after four and a half months of negotiations. It provides for a close co-operation with France. After the long negotiations which were begun in Berlin, continued in Paris, and thence transferred to Moscow, the pact has been practically settled.

From a reliable source it is learned that the new treaty embodies three sections, financial, economic and political.

Henri Franklin, Bouillon has been sent to Moscow to complete the draft of the treaty, according to advice received at Berlin. He is one of the group with whom M. Scheinermann, president of the Russia State Bank negotiated in Paris.

Bouillon's mission follows that of M. Herriot, the Socialist leader in the Chamber of Deputies, which was a success.

There have been many interruptions in the conference between the French and Russians, chiefly on the subject of recognition of debts. Two weeks ago it was thought that the treaty would be signed, but an unexpected snag arose which has only been straightened out in the last few days.

The French are trying to bring a definite agreement into being before the conclusion of the British elections.

Expensive Luxury

Politically, it is learned that the new treaty will sacrifice the Little Entente and Poland for the benefit of Russia. This combination has been an expensive luxury for France which President Millerand, at least, would like to do away with.

Senator Demogel, who visited Russia recently, declared that with a renewal of close relations between France and Russia, Poland would no longer be needed.

Consummation of the treaty would be a serious blow for Germany. German leaders insist that it will in no

WE do not mind so much having colds ourselves, for we imagine we can tell when they are getting serious and apply the remedy.

But when the children cough it is different. Especially does the sharp, metallic cough of croup send a thrill through the mother's nervous system.

The trouble is the child does not realize the danger, cannot describe the danger, and is not convenient to send for treatment, unless it is within reach of a drug store.

Being pleasant to the taste, gentle and soothing in action, and composed of simple ingredients of well-known medicinal value, this medicine is especially suited for children, as a relief from coughs, croup, bronchitis, sore throat, whooping cough, etc.

In very many thousands of homes it is the old favorite treatment which has proven its exceptional value so many times that it is depended upon absolutely.

Next to knowing what to use, the most important point is to apply the treatment promptly, and this is why we emphasize the necessity of keeping Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine on hand at all times. For this reason it is well to get in the way of buying the large, family-size bottle. This ensures an adequate supply.

way interfere with the Rapallo accord, but Krassin's statements in Bonne Bay when the ship was there Berlin indicate that Germany has much to fear.

There are said to be no military clauses in the document. But with the cementing of political relations with financial help to Russia, France might win great economic advantages and the military clauses are not necessary now.

Sagona Encounters Fog and Gales

(Western Star)

The S. S. Sagona, Captain Taverner arrived from North on Saturday noon; the trip had occupied just two weeks. Heavy gales of wind accompanied by dense fog were encountered and on account of heavy sea she was unable to land considerable of her freight for Parsons' Pond, Daniel's Hr., and several other places along the north-west coast. The ship was delayed at Battle Hr. two days through fog, and she had to put back to Bonne Bay on the northward trip owing to storm. Large quantities of freight were handled throughout the trip, the ship being practically loaded all the time. She brought a large number of passengers. Captain Taverner reports mild weather on Labrador coast. The hills were completely bare of snow so far north as the ship went. On Newfoundland section of Labrador the people appear to be fairly well provisioned for the winter. There was

WHEN PA BEGINS TO SHAVE

When Sunday morning comes around
My pa hanks up his strop,
And takes his razor out and makes
It go, kerflop, kerflop.
And then he gets his mug and brush
And yells to me "Behave!"
I tell you, things is mighty still
When pa begins to shave!

Then pa he stirs his brush around
An' makes the soapuds fly.
An' sometimes when he stirs too hard
He gits some in his eye.
I tell you, but it's funny then
To see pa stamp and rave,
But you mustn't get ketch'd laffin'
When pa begins to shave.

The hired man, he dassent talk,
An' even ma's afeard.
An' you can hear the razor click
A-cuttin' thru his beard,
An' then my Uncle Will, he laffs An' says, "Why John' you're brave!"

An' pa he swears, an' ma just smiles
When pa begins to shave.
When pa gets done a-shaving of His face, he turns around
And Uncle Will says "Why John, You're chin looks like ploughed ground!"
An' then he laffs an' laffs an' laffs,
But I got to behave,
Cos things is apt to happen quick
When pa begins to shave.

ADVERTISE IN THE "ADVOCATE"

A New Settlement In White Bay

Great Work Accomplished By Mr. H. J. Crowe For People of Northern Sections.

CROWE WILL SPEND WINTER IN WHITE BAY.

Mr. H. J. Crowe, who very recently arrived from Hampden where his logging operations are giving so much assistance to that part of the country, will leave by Tuesday's express for Canada, including Halifax, Montreal and Toronto. Mr. Crowe will stop off at Grand Falls on his way to Port aux Basques.

Following his characteristic record for social welfare, Mr. Crowe is taking along with him to Halifax a little boy, Leonard Dilmartin, from the Hampden section. Master Dilmartin is deaf and dumb and it is his benefactor's intention to get him admitted to the Halifax School for the Blind. At the present time the Nfld. quota for that institution is filled, but Mr. Crowe believes he will succeed in getting Master Dilmartin admitted. Work of this nature must bring forth the kind approval and sympathy of all.

But in many other ways has Mr. Crowe shown his anxiety to help those whose lot in life has not been favored much.

The work at Hampden is more extensive than is generally understood. Forty-five houses have been erected, a large warehouse, barn and other necessary buildings. Some twelve camps, capable of housing thirty-five loggers each, besides several camps by sub-contractors are erected, while $50,000 worth of provisions have been purchased and sent north. This amount is four times as much as would be ordinarily needed for loggers suffering from the lack of food.

Yet Mr. Crowe is coping with the situation with great earnestness. A large school with modern appliances, including a piano and organ, and two competent lady teachers, is now taking care of about 250 children; while a doctor recommended by the medical faculty of Dalhousie to Mr. Crowe, is laboring in the settlement with scarlet fever and measles now prevalent throughout the country.

Already 1600 cords of wood have been cut and, despite the crowded condition of affairs, the future is looked forward to with courage. A new settlement is in the making in White Bay.

Mr. Crowe will return in February and will spend the rest of the season in White Bay.

Prominent Salvationist NEW HOUSE to Leave St. John's

COMMANDANT HURD

Commandant Hurd of the Salvation Army, will conduct farewell services to-morrow. The Commandant's departure from this city and country is regretted not only by the adherents of the Salvation Army, but by the country generally. During his stay in Newfoundland, the Commandant's untiring efforts towards the betterment of social conditions and his many labours of love for all, have won him a warm place in the hearts of citizens generally; and his sojourn will ever be regarded as a pleasant memory.

Commandant Hurd came to Newfoundland in August of 1922, where he stayed here for a period of three months, going to Bermuda for last winter, where important Army activities demanded his attention. Returning here from Bermuda on June 28th of this year, Commandant Hurd has been tireless in his efforts towards the successful completion of the Grace Maternity Hospital matters, and with the exception of a three months' period spent in Toronto, he has since June devoted all his energy to Salvation Army social activities.

The Grace Maternity Hospital opens on the 11th inst., and it is not too much to say that but for this great social leader, this great work would not have been at least so near accomplishment.

The Commandant will be leaving shortly for Moncton, where he will take over the responsibility of financing the maternity hospitals at Halifax, Sydney and St. John. The Advocate wishes him every success and happiness in the future and joins with his many friends in trusting that he will again return to our country.

Conservatives Are Greatly In Minority.

At 11 o'clock this evening the returns from yesterday's general elections showed the standing of the parties as: Conservatives 259, Labour 185, Liberal 148, other parties 10.

First Issue of Local Coinage

Editor Advocate.
Sir,—In reference to a comment a short while ago, as regards the first issue of a local coinage for Newfoundland, I would say that the press of 1865 speaks about the matter as it was in that year that the coin was issued. Governor Hill, writing to Lord Kimberley in 1872 on the state of Newfoundland at the time said that the Act 26, Vic. Cap. 18, providing for the issue of a local coinage and for keeping accounts in dollars and cents began in 1865. On that occasion there were issued 5, 1, 20 and 50 cent silver coins, and two dollar gold coins, and one cent bronze coins. Peruvian, Spanish and Mexican dollars were accepted as legal also. May be some of your readers can give further information on the matter.

I remain, Yours truly,

CITIZEN.

Dec. 7th, 1923.

Marriage

At the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, December 5th, by Rev. E. R. Nichols, Rector, Miss Isabel Furness to Mr. Henry Crocker, of this city.

WEDDING BELLS

CROCKER FURNES

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Michael and All Angels on Wednesday evening, December 5th, when Miss Isabel Furness, youngest daughter of Mrs. E. Chary and the late Thomas Furness, was united in the Holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Henry Crocker, son of the late William Crocker, wheelwright of this city, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. E. R. Nichols, rector of St. Michael's.

The bride, who was charmingly attired in blue crepe de chene and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums and sweet peas, entered the Church on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Thos. J. Pope, while Mr. Vavasour, the organist of St. Michael's, played a beautiful march. The bride was attended by Miss Florence Crocker, sister of the groom, who wore blue silk and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Jan Cowan.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Lester, Topsail Road, where the friends of the bride and groom partook of a sumptuous repast prepared by Mrs. Fred Lester, in her usual good style. During the evening a toast list was gone through and the health of the bride and groom was proposed by Mr. Thos. J. Pope, and responded to by the groom. Mr. Henry Cowan, in a very nice speech wished the bride and groom every good luck and happiness. The bride was the recipient of many costly presents. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful fox fur, and to the groomsmen a gold tie-pin, and the bridesmaid a gold bracelet.

The Advocate joins in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Crocker many happy years of wedded life.

Vicks Breaks Colds Over-Night — Relieves Croup In 15 Minutes.

Vicks VapoRub, the new external treatment for all cold troubles, which has met with such tremendous success in the United States and in the Dominion of Canada, has at last been introduced into Newfoundland.

Through the efforts of the local agent in cooperation with the druggists, the manufacturers of Vicks have supplied several thousand trial packages for free distribution. If by any chance you did not receive one of these you will be glad to learn that there is still an opportunity. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it as directed. You will then receive by return mail a free sample of this truly wonderful "outside" remedy.

WHAT VICKS IS.

Vicks is a vaporizing salve for the relief of colds, croup, sore throat, bronchitis, coughs, etc. It is the discovery of an American druggist who found a way to combine in salve form the world's best remedies for cold troubles.

Made at first in the back room of his little store, the fame of Vicks spread county by county and state by state until now Vicks is more largely used than any other remedy of its kind in the world.

Over 17 million jars of Vicks are used yearly in the United States alone. It is also a family standby in thousands of homes in Canada, and enjoys a remarkable volume of recommendation from neighbor to neighbor.

NO DOSING — JUST RUB IT ON.

Especially if there are children at home you will want to take advantage of this brief opportunity to try Vicks free of expense. Mothers will like Vicks because it is externally applied, quickly effective and cannot upset delicate little stomachs. Vicks is good, of course, for adults as well, and is also a handy thing to have around the house for cuts, chapped hands and lips and itching skin troubles.

Don't miss the opportunity to try this famous outside remedy. The free supply is limited, so fill out the coupon now while the matter is fresh in your mind and get it in the mail.

MOTHERS EVERYWHERE ADOPTING DIRECT TREATMENT.

Gone are the days of bitter, black medicine and nauseating pills. In countless thousands of homes Vicks has replaced these drugs and has rendered unnecessary the burning and blistering effects of poultices and plasters. Many reputable doctors recommend Vicks for most cold troubles because there is no dosing. You just rub it on.

There never have been—there perhaps never will be—better remedies for cold troubles than the good old-fashioned ingredients contained in Vicks. Camphor, Menthol, Oil of Eucalyptus, Turpentine and Oil of Thyme are but a few of the age-old remedial agents employed.

HOW VICKS IS USED.

For Common Colds, Sore Throat, and Bronchitis, you rub Vicks over the throat and chest and cover with a hot flannel cloth, leaving the clothing or bed-covers loose around the neck so that the medicated vapors arising may be freely inhaled. In this way the most stubborn cold is frequently broken up over-night.

For Deep Chest Colds or Threatened Pneumonia, first apply hot wet towels over the throat and chest to open the pores of the skin and then spread Vicks on thickly. Cover with two thicknesses of hot flannel cloths.

For Asthma and Head Colds, melt a little Vicks in a spoon and inhale the vapors. Also apply up the nostrils and sniff well back.

Croup is usually relieved in 15 minutes. Just rub Vicks over throat and chest until the breathing becomes easy then cover with a warm flannel cloth. One application at bedtime usually prevents a night attack.

Vicks is particularly recommended for children's colds because it is externally applied and does not disturb the digestion. It can therefore be freely used on the youngest member of the family.

Be sure to get a free sample before the supply is exhausted. Mail the coupon now.
